WALES AS A SPORT.

A JOLLY GOOD FELLOW, ACCORDING TO BUFFALO BILL AND OTHERS.

The Prince's Green Youth—A Wife and a Beard—Seeling Life—Variety Entertainments in Marlborough House—Amusing the Shah—The Prince's Popularity.

(Special Correspondence.)

LONDON, April 2.—When so potent a personage as the Hon. John Lysimachus Sullivan, ambassador extraordinary from the United States at the court of St. James, potent, at least, till he failed to knock out Mitchell—condemningly pronouncing H. H. H. the Prince of Wales to be "a fine fellow," there is hope for the future of the English monarchy.

In much the same elegant phraseology, and with equal enthusiasm, three other representative Americans have recently set the seal of their high approval upon the royal head, on which there is now no "hair apparent," namely, the Hon. W. Buffalo F. Cody Bill, Mr. Chauncey M. Depew and Mr. James G. Blaine. Let us see what is this remarkable charm in the social life of the Prince of Wales.

The first time I saw him acting in a public capacity was in 1857, when he rode in a closed carriage with his father, who was going to open an exhibition. The prince consort was a noble looking man, then only in his 38th year, with a high arched brow, the higher for his baldness, clear light blue eyes, and an expression of serene intellectuality. His son, the Prince of Wales, was a lanky, shapely lad of 16, with a very soft look, much akin to what the Scotch call "half daft." And, in truth, he never was a bright youth.

The next big occasion was when he brought his beautiful Danish bride in public procession into London. That was in March, 1863, and, take it all in all, was by far the greatest public show in England in our time. The prince had grown more manly in appearance, though still his long, fair, silky hair and those liquid eyes of his gave him a somewhat effeminate look. Two or three years later he grew his beard, and the razor at once went out of fashion. To his beard he owes his undoubted air of dignity. Though his nose is a rather prominent aquiline, it conveys no idea of strength. It indicates a refined taste, inclining the owner to sensuous (which need not involve sensual) indulgences. Since his narrow escape from the clutches of the same typhoid fever which killed his father, the prince has increased his weight and his baldness, developments which decidedly bring the consolatory compensation of increased dignity. Now, at 47, he looks at his very best, and his social away was never so supreme.

There was a period when Puritanism loudly bawled and castigated the sowing of wild oats by princes, whose misfortune it is to live so largely under the prying public eye. If princes were the only sinners of this sort society would be cleaner today than it is, the world over. However, the Prince of Wales did many wrong things that were foolish, and many foolish things that were not very wrong, and, as any foolish prince richly deserves, he paid a smart penalty for his follies. It is an open question how far royalty should go in patronizing popular amusements. The social and pecuniary value of royal (and presidential and knickerbocker and millionaire) patronage is immense. Some hold that as figureheads are highly paid, they ought to do something in return. Evidently the Prince of Wales has shared this view, for ever since his marriage, a quarter of a century ago, he has carried on the maternal business of social sovereignty with a vigor and vim which have won him a popularity hard to be understood in America, but which may be gauged by the sentiments expressed by the representative Americans quoted above.

When the Music hall (which Americans call the Variety theatre) established itself as a popular institution, about 1863, the Prince of Wales, not being free to go to them, used to send for the great men of genius who delighted their audiences as "lion comiques" with their elegant "patter" songs. His royal highness used to have merry little supper parties at Marlborough house, at which "the great Vance" would sing, or rather bellow—

Champagne Charlie is my name, Knocking down bobbies is my game.

The great "Jolly Nash" was privileged to chant his refined melodies, and I have since seen him produce and play on a silver cornet which he proudly said, had been presented to him by the prince.

The Duke of Sutherland used in those years to be an enthusiastic amateur fireman. I think he kept an engine of his own, anyway I have more than once seen him drive better skelter right through the crowd at fires, the Prince of Wales being seated at his side, and mightily the pair enjoyed the sight, the excitement and the fun. Boxing matches were always a favorite sport in the princely circle, and I hope they always will be. The prince has long been a warm admirer of the art and its foremost artists. Sullivan is only the latest in a long procession that was headed by Sayers and Hewson, and the modest ways of those two genuine men won far more hearty admiration in England than the nauseous conceit and brag of Sullivan permits, though his record and his bigness drew the crowd, until his real lack of power was exposed, just as prize cattle draw them.

When the Shah of Persia visited London in 1873 he was boarded and lodged in Buckingham palace, and fearful were the tales that went whispering around about the heathenish doings within that semi-sacred abode. Visions of a harem arose out of the most trifling joke of the scandal monger, but what was undoubtedly true was the furnishing of athletic sports to amuse and edify the diamond covered Oriental. Boxers and wrestlers were engaged, and the Shah's delight grew into such ecstasy that at last he demanded, begged, implored to have somebody hanged for his delectation. It was hard to withhold so small a favor, especially as there were several around the court in those days who would have been none the worse for a hanging, but his serene majesty had to be informed that he would have to wait until a public execution should be due at the Old Bailey, and then he would have to go to it, as it could not be brought to him.

Some of the prince's chums of those days have well proven the utility of nauly sports since then, notably Lord Charles Beresford, who is one of the very best fighting men in the service.

In his country home in Norfolk the prince indulges to the full in the outdoor sports, which are the glory of the English country gentleman. His estate is one of the most varied and picturesque in the kingdom, away up in its snug corner, washed by the waves of the North sea. It is stocked with game. You are encircled by madcap hares and rabbits every foot of your tramp through its miles of bracken, and your presence little disturbs their frolics. Every minute or so you flutter a covey of partridges or pheasants, woodcocks or grouse, and there are deer in abundance. In other parts are the pedigree herds and flocks, and in well kept inclosures roam strange animals of all sorts, acclimatized and quite at home. Now and again great gulls sweep down from the sea, and specimens of wild fowl of all but extinct types are often to be seen. In the shooting season the prince has large house parties to share his sport. The visitors are ever going and coming, so that in a month there may have been 100 guests. The neighboring gentry and the farmers from the country side get invited on special days, and great are the days when the landlord prince and his neighbors and tenants meet on equal terms, in the good old English way, to have a grand "shoot." All the London hospitals get gifts of game in turn from the prince, and the sick poor in the Llandingham district are never forgotten. The prince is equally fond of the saddle, and is as much at home in the hunt as in his daily trot around Rotten Row in town, where his hand is ever lastingly up to his hat returning the salutes of his friends and the public.

He is not an orator but he makes an admirable speech, always business like and abounding in geniality. In this word lies the secret of his power, which is just as great in one direction as in another. The roughs and toughs of the East End and in the provinces are quite as fervent admirers of the prince as are the aristocracy, and what we term the middle classes are no whit behind. Wherever he goes the prince receives the warmest welcome. When Joseph Chamberlain, recently in Washington, was mayor of Birmingham, he, being a declared republican, entertained the prince on a state visit and proposed his health. Birmingham went mad with enthusiasm over its royal visitor. The prince is too wise to show the slightest political bias, and as he does his social duty so thoroughly and with such tact, he is a universal favorite as the figurehead of English society.

Revenge.

The cold, haughty, purse proud merchant prince who treats his ribbon counter gentlemen and gentlemen's underwearer salesladies with mere civility or chilling indifference had better beware. The time may come when the positions may be reversed.

"See here, Jinks," said one of these arrogant millionaires one day to a ninety pound ribbon counter clerk, "you want to attend to your business better, young man, and not waste so much of your time flirting with that red headed underwear girl across the aisle, mind that."

Enraged and humiliated the down trodden ribbon counter clerk seizes and seeks revenge. His time comes soon, aye, that very night!

The purse proud, cold blooded merchant prince goes to the theatre. He buys an admission ticket and stands up, being of an economical turn of mind.

"Let us pass, sir," says a calm, cold voice at his side. He looks down and beholds the ribbon counter clerk in the magnificence of full dress, with the underwear girl in flowing robes and sixteen button kids hanging to his arm. The eyes of the men meet, but there is no sign of recognition on the part of the ribbon counter clerk, only a cold, haughty, fixed stare as he passed proudly on to the 38 seats reserved for him and the underwear girl, while the snubbed and humiliated merchant prince stands on in the midst of his own bitter reflections.—Detroit Free Press.

Theory of Chemical Food.

A subject which has occupied many imaginative scientists is, the attainment by synthesis of organic results similar to those produced by nature. The scientist can take animal and vegetable products, and by analysis determine the quantity, and even the quality, of the various substances which have entered into their composition. But when he has determined the formulae, and attempted to follow it and blend these substances together, in order to produce a result like that in nature, he has found that his process would not work; something was wanting.

Yet enthusiasts believe that advance in the science of chemistry will solve the problem. Already it has been found possible to manufacture glucose in the laboratory out of the simple elements, in the same manner that glucose might be produced by making use of vegetable matter, and sanguine souls see in this the beginning of manufactures which shall anticipate and replace the processes of nature. With their impaired vision the same enthusiasts see a time when, by combination of gases and other elements, the chemists will turn out the materials needed for the food of man. This is a beautiful theory. The man who hungers for a beefsteak is to apply to a public chemist, who will mix and boil, and stir and precipitate, until he finally produces a chemical beefsteak. As a matter of fact, it is not difficult to obtain the chemical constituents of steak, or any other food, but we fear that the artificial production of animal food will only be attained when spontaneous generation is actually demonstrated, instead of being vaguely claimed.

It would be a beautiful thing if we could all make our own food, and become independent of butcher and baker and milkman; but even if chemical constituents were accurate, the palate, eye and demands of the stomach must be consulted, as well as chemical formulae. It may be that a time will come when our food will be prepared in chemical laboratories, according to formulae; but we shall not live to see that time, and on the whole we don't want to.—Frank Leslie's.

COLONIZATION SCHEME.

The question of colonization having at last been forced upon the Imperial Government in a striking form, and in a manner calculated to benefit the Dominion of Canada and the Northwest Territories in particular, it behooves us to accord the heartiest welcome at our disposal to any enterprising British Company that seeks a domicile in our midst. The small number of Scotch crofters who are being assisted to emigrate to Canada by the Imperial Government this season, as an experiment, cannot be expected for some time to show such results as will encourage the cabinet at home to repeat the dose on any extended scale owing to the howls of a strong section of the opposition in the British House of Commons led on by the distinguished proprietor of Truth, from a belief that the real desire of the government is more to help landlords to get rid of troublesome tenants at the expense of the people, than to assist the tenants themselves, as the most liberal politicians at home have always supported any plan free from jobbery that will ameliorate the condition of the tillers of the soil. It will, therefore, be seen that owing to a combination of circumstances it is private efforts alone that must really be looked to for the purpose of settling the fertile plains of the Northwest and there cannot be too many well organized companies created for such a meritorious object.

The Canadian Pacific Colonization Corporation (limited) has recently been registered in the Northwest Territories under the ordinance relating to Joint Stock Companies, and has opened an office in this town under the auspices of a gentleman experienced not only as a lawyer, but as an agriculturist in the person of Mr. Bernard, who may be said in a word to be a thoroughly all round business man, well calculated to make any matter he undertakes a complete success. The scope of the operations of this corporation are of a novel character and may be classed mainly under three heads:

(1) The establishment of an agricultural college for the Northwest in which young men can go through a course of agricultural training calculated to fit them for profitably carrying on general farm operations.

(2) The development of colonies in desirable centres in which a town will be established provided with clubs, library reading rooms and all other conveniences necessary in a new country to prevent well educated men degenerating in their leisure hours.

(3) The starting and working of supply farms, cheese factories, creameries and other industries suitable to the locality for the purpose of providing a market for products which must otherwise go to waste or be parted with at unremunerative prices.

Of course the working out of such a programme will involve carrying out many minor and useful objects which will be of service to the country generally, such as establishing ferries, tramways or other modes of communication to and from places at present remote and isolated from the want of such facilities. But we think we have said enough to show that the persons administering the corporation have carefully studied the needs of this country, and the sources from which industrious colonists may expect to realize a competence at once and an independence in the near future. Everyone knows that a colonist settling without proper guidance is liable to make a mistake and cast a slur on the Dominion in the event of failure to settle advantageously, and the country cannot afford to lose its character through mis-guided colonists.

Under the scheme of the corporation under review all these pitfalls will be avoided. The colonist will have an opportunity of having his homestead selected by the corporation on Government lands on most approved terms obtained by a resident on the spot free from all profit by the corporation, by which he will be provided on moderate terms with a residence and offices furnished according to his requirements and if he prefers to enter into possession in early spring (which is the best time for doing so) he can have his lands ploughed in the previous season ready for seeding on his arrival, and be furnished from the supply farm with horses and cattle sufficient for the commencement of his operations generally. Of course no corporation could be expected to do so much good for humanity for philanthropic motives and we are glad to see that without in any way mauling the colonist there is an abundant source of profit for the corporation out of their supply farms, cheese factories and other industries apart from what will be derived from the increase of value of the lands of the corporation acquired from the Canadian Pacific Railway or other persons, which adjoin the Government lands proposed to be settled, as of course settlers hereafter must either pay a large price for their farms when convenient homesteads cannot be obtained, or settle in remote districts.

The operations of the corporation will, we understand, be commenced by the acquisition of two properties, the first consisting of a rich tract of land in Manitoba within a short distance of Winnipeg, at present profitably worked for mixed farming and on which there is a cheese factory in operation, supplied by milk from the corporation's own herd of well graded cattle specially imported from Ontario and well acclimatized to the country, in addition to milk obtainable from neighboring settlers. The second property consists of about a hundred square miles of the most fertile country of Alberta district in the Northwest, situated about sixty miles east of Calgary, well protected by the shelter of the Rocky Mountains where cattle can graze all the year round owing to the favorable climate, a fact respecting this portion of the Northwest Territories which is not understood by people in the old country, who have a dream before them of the Arctic regions and perpetual snow. It is true that in Manitoba, 700 miles east of Calgary, the winters are very severe and frighten many old country people who will not put up with a seven months winter, even to be located on fertile wheat lands, but those accustomed to the mixed farming of the old country will prefer the genial climate of Alberta, recommended by the medical faculty owing to the dryness of the atmosphere as the most beneficial climate for persons affected with chest complaints, gout, or rheumatism. Instances are on record of persons in the first stages of consumption being completely cured by a residence in Alberta, while the lives of those coming here even in advanced stages of the disease have been prolonged for years. The site of first town to be established by the corporation has been selected adjoining the Alberta property and is to be called Queenstown and the necessary surveys are being made with a view to selling plots to the numerous persons who are eager to establish stores in the new town, which will be situated about twelve miles from Cluny on the C. P. R. on the trail to Fort

McLeod. A ferry is being placed across the Bow River at Blackfoot crossing of the use of the colonists and it is expected that a tramway or light railway will connect the town and existing railway station at an early date. Vast coal deposits of a valuable character underlie the whole country under the new town site and neighborhood and a distinct English company is at present making arrangements under the advice of Mr. George Bradford an experienced English coal mining engineer for working a colliery close to the Blackfoot crossing on the Indian reserve with the approval of the Dominion Government and C. P. R. and colonists will have an opportunity of obtaining fuel from a coal company if the corporation does not work the coal on their own lands. We understand other locations are under review for selection as soon as the corporation under review has fully set in operation the properties they have on hand, with a view to have other colonies at convenient distances within the belt of lands owned by the C. P. R.

Space will not permit us to say more at present about the vast and well planned scheme of the Canadian Pacific Colonization Corporation (limited), but we must not omit to mention for the information of colonists unacquainted with the Northwest and fond of a holiday that "Queens town" will be only a few hours journey from Banff hot springs, a pleasure and healthful resort established by the government and railway company combined, quite an inland "Brighton" in its way.

Horse Notes.

Dr. J. V. Newton, of Toledo, O., has sold Nasby, 2:40 to a party in Indiana, for $2000.

Isaiah Thomas, of Goffstown, N. H., owner of Viking, 2:1½, is nursing a broken arm.

The 2:30 trotting list comprises the names of 2,874 horses that have trotted in 2:30 or better.

In France and Germany trotting events are decided on turf, and mighty rough turf at that.

W. C. Daly has purchased from Wyndham Walden the chestnut filly Barefoot for $2,000.

E. S. Baldwin's two-year-old filly, Rosebud and his two-year-old colt Gannymede, are said to be very fast.

The pacing mare Kitty Redback, 2:29½ owned at Toledo, O., is looking finely, and her friends expect she will beat 2:20 this season.

Harvey Thorne, of Millersburg, Ky., lost from death by foaling on May 10, an Almont mare with a record of 2:21, and valued at $2,000.

The May running races for the Western Iowa Circuit opened at Council Bluffs, Iowa, on May 15. The first race, one-half mile, for all ages, was won by Tom Birin, Lottie F. second, Donovan third; time, 51½ seconds. The Merchants' Stake, six furlongs, for three-year-olds, was won by Chancellor, Fillmore second, Aristi third; time, 1:22½. The third race one mile, for all ages, was won by Sunday, Derby second, Forest King third; time 1:52. The weather was cold and the track heavy.

In forwarding a list of recent foals at Highland Park stock farm, Dubuque, Iowa, Messrs. Stout write that every one of them are exceptionally good, and doing well. Nine are by Nutwood and one by Lord Russell. They have a number of mares due to foal in about four weeks, and also have a number of Nutwoods belonging to other parties, and the mares are being bred back to Nutwood. They have booked to Nutwood this year twenty-five outside mares, and been obliged to refuse twenty-two. This popular sire's book for 1889 is already three-quarters full at $500.

James M. George, a well-known farmer living near Sydney, Ill., has a remarkable freak of nature in the shape of a three-legged colt. The animal is now over two weeks old, and apparently is as healthy and frisky as any other on the place, but one of its forelegs and most of the shoulder to which it should be attached are entirely lacking. About eight months ago, according to Mr. George, the mother of this colt witnessed an accident by which a horse's leg was cut off by a barbed fence wire, and was seemingly much impressed by the distressing occurrence. Curiosity seekers by the hundred gather to see the strange sight.

A resolution was adopted by the Methodist Protestant Conference at Adrian recently, announcing its unalterable opposition to any form of liquor license, high or low, and condemning clergymen for signing a petition for a license to sell liquor. A resolution condemning the use of tobacco, provoked an animated discussion, as a large proportion of the clergymen used the weed.

Decoration Day.

The years that have elapsed since the close of the civil war have served to obliterate all sectional feeling, and a united prosperous nation joins in keeping green the graves of all its beloved dead. It is in this spirit that the publisher of the New York Family Story Paper has had written a thrilling and pathetic romance, peculiarly appropriate to this national holiday, entitled "Faithful Leonard; or His Grave Kept Green." In the same paper will also be found a weekly installment of the "Life and Adventures of a Showman of P. T. Barnum," written by himself, and equally interesting to the young folks as well as heads of families. These are rare literary treats, and those of our readers who are not already enjoying them will do well to obtain No. 766 of the New York Family Story Paper off their newsdealers or send direct to the publisher, Munro's Publishing House, Nos. 24 and 26 Vandewater Street, New York, and receive the paper four months for one dollar, postage free.

The Toronto Empire in an inspired article says a western man should be given a portfolio.

A young son of Mr. W. B. Scarth died here to-day. Mr. Scarth arrived from Winnipeg too late to see the child alive.

They were at that time well supplied with food and clothing and in no danger of immediate danger of attack. The deserters could give no news about Stanley's proposed route.

Their Affairs Unsettled.

VICTORIA, B. C., May 29.—The brig Tahiti arrived here yesterday from the Fiji Islands and reports affairs on the Leeward Islands as unsettled and menacing. The French Government at Tahiti is sending water, provisions and ammunition to the fleet of merchant vessels, none of the fleet daring to leave port for fear of trouble. The cause of the trouble is French war ships hoisting their flags over two of the islands and the natives objected and hauled the flags down. The French then fired on the natives who immediately took up arms. They are now posted in the mountains five hundred strong. There have been several skirmishes in which a number of marines and natives were killed. The French are awaiting the arrival of the Admiral to settle the question.

The Bank Excursion.—The Calgary Base Ball Boys sold Their Own.

About 40 persons availed themselves of excursion rates to spend the 24th at the National Park.

The Calgary base ball team played the Banff boys at the National Park yesterday. Calgary made 25 runs in 6 innings, Banff 6 runs in 7 innings. The general programme of sports were gone through with. The steam yachts were well patronized during the day.

In the evening a public meeting was held to select a candidate to run for the Northwest assembly, for the Red Deer district. Dr. Brett was unanimously chosen as the standard bearer.

A sad drowning accident occurred yesterday morning about 9 a. m., at the National Park baths, Banff. Mr. James H. McMurtry, of the firm Ferguson & McMurtry, merchants of Calgary, went up to the springs with a party of excursionists, on the evening of the 23rd instant, shortly after breakfast he went out to take a bath in the outer basin, the water varies in depth from four to nine feet. Mr. McMurtry took a plunge into the basin going under water, and never coming up till he was taken out dead by the caretaker some nine minutes after he went into the water. A gentleman who had just come out of the bath noticed McMurtry dive in, this party spent some minutes in dressing, after which he looked around and remarked that the man who had plunged into the water after he came out had not come up. Mr. James Grierson of Calgary, and Mr. Stirrett, school teacher of anthracite, were close by. Grierson first saw the body when swimming across where it lay, but did not succeed in recovering it, he was only got by the caretaker diving for him, many theories are put forward as to the reason why he never came to the surface, he may have struck on the bottom, and being stunned, did not recover before being choked by the water, which is heavily impregnated with sulphur. As an inquest is being held it is better not to publish surmises about it. Mr. McMurtry was born in the township of March, county of Carlton, Ont., and was about 32 years of age at the time of his death. He was brought up to business in his father's general store at March, where his parents still reside, who with three sisters and three brothers were startled to hear of his untimely death. One brother is a veterinary surgeon in Arnprior Ont. The deceased had been in business here for about a year and a half, and had won the respect and esteem of all who knew him.

LONDON, May 22.—In the middle of December last, Mr. William Gilman, tea merchant, London, Ont., sent his imbecile son, about 20 years of age, on an errand to his sister. He had been drowned and carried there by the recent floods. The father identified the body as that of his missing son.

More Thoroughbred Stock.

The number of fine thoroughbred animals of different classes which are being brought into this district, bodes well for the future of this country. Mr. Joseph Fisher, of Sheep Creek, has just received some fine stock for his ranch, about 20 miles southeast of Calgary. They consist of one imported clydesdale stallion 16 hands high, he is a bright bay color, with a stripe on his face and three white feet, and one imported dark brown clydesdale mare. There are also three clydesdale mares, bred in the county of Hants, Ont., and one Canadian bred two year old clydesdale stallion. The english bred horses were brought from Carlisle, Cumberland county. Along with this shipment there were also two full bred short horn, two year old Durham bulls, for Wright, Bowen & Turner, whose ranch is situated about 15 miles from Calgary.

Dangerous Wounding.

A very savage attack was made last night by a colored man called Nigger John, on a young colored woman named Jennie Hanson. The man is well known about Calgary, he having worked about Bain Bros. Livery stables. The injured girl is living with her mother, Elizabeth Hanson, in a small house opposite O. H. Allens brewery, on Stephen avenue. The mother states that Nigger John had been in the habit of coming to her house, and hanging around, very much against the will of the inmates, last night he paid them another of his late visits, and was behaving so badly that a couple of mounted police who were passing, about 11:30 o'clock were attracted by the noise, and on entering the house, were requested by the mother to remove John, which they did but not having committed any very serious offence up to that time, they did not detain him, in less than an hour John returned, and being exasperated at the woman for having him ejected, became very abusive, threatening violence. The girl, seeing there was danger in remaining in the house, rushed out into the street crying for help, but there was no one at hand, Nigger John proceeded to pound the girl about the face and head, inflicting some desperate wounds. The mother came to the rescue, and getting between the man and her daughter, accused him of murdering her daughter, by this time the girl was in a fainting condition, and getting frightened John made good his escape, before the police arrived on the scene. The mother cannot say positively what weapon the nigger used, but the wounds indicate that it was a sharp instrument, the girl being fearfully cut about the face and eyes.

Dominion Day Sports.

A citizens meeting was held at the old town hall last evening, to receive the report of the canvassing committee. There was a fair turn out at the meeting. An executive committee consisting of Messrs A. Lucas, F. Dick, H. Douglas, Joseph Maw and D. Cameron, was appointed to arrange a programme of sports. The canvassing committee had met with good success, but were not quite ready to report. However, the subscriptions already obtained are such as to warrant the committee in the expression of the opinion that the sum of $2,000 in purses and prizes will be given. One important conclusion was arrived at, namely, that all the Athletic sports will be held in the forenoon and some convenient place in town. The horse racing will be in the afternoons on Owens' race course. A meeting of the executive committee will take place in the old town hall at 8 o'clock this evening, and a meeting of the canvassing committee at 9 o'clock in the same place.

Horse Killed.

About one o'clock this afternoon as a freight train was moving east from the C. P. R. station, a horse belonging to Mr. Ross, Photographer, which was tied to a telegraph pole on the south side of the railway track got across to the north side of the line, getting frightened by the train the horse began running eastward, the rope naturally pulled him on to the track in front of the engine. Though the train was brought almost to a stand, the horse was struck by the cow catcher nearly severing his right fore foot at the fetlock. Mr. Bell fired a couple of revolver shots into the horses head and Mr. Mortimer finished him with a bolt from a Winchester rifle.

The Bow River Lodge, A. F. & A. M. held its regular monthly meeting in the masonic hall on Monday evening, the 21st instant. Amongst the visiting brethren present, was the right worshipful brother W. The Pope Greatly Exercised over the Action Taken by the National League.

London Times on Lansdowne.

LONDON, May 23.—The Times devotes its first editorial to Canadian affairs in view of the change of Governor-General. It eulogizes Lansdowne and says that Canada has gained an importance in the world as well as in the Empire, which reflects lustre on the period of his administration. It notes the completion of the C. P. R. and the work of the Fisheries Commission and regards the fact that Lansdowne has been appointed Viceroy of India and his place in Canada being filled by an experienced and popular cabinet minister both complimentary to Canada's growth and rank.

Don Pedro is dying. The last sacrament of the church has been administered.

That Sheep Story.

On March 21st the River Press published an article concerning the Clark Bros., & Co., of Chateaux, which has been going the rounds of the press, and which is creating a very erroneous impression. From the statement that in four years some 4,000 sheep increased in number to 12,000, and the wool clip from 20,000 to 50,000 pounds, the River Press and some other territorial papers argue that there have been immense profits in the business. As political capital is being made out of this statement and as the wool industry has unfortunately become a bone of contention in politics, we cannot let this matter go unnoticed.

We know nothing of an exact nature about this particular case, but in some similar instances we know that wages to the average amount of $6,000 per year have been paid to run such an outfit. That thousands of dollars each year, in addition to wages, have been required for improvements and to feed and shelter help; and that in nine cases out of ten the parties who have been running sheep for the last five years, could not sell out to-day and show any considerable profit out of the money invested in the business.

The River Press might put $10,000 in to a newspaper enterprise, and in five years be running three newspapers, which if closed out would land the company in debt. Absolutely nothing is proved from the fact that a company started with 4,000 sheep, and now have 12,000 head.—Montana Wool Grower.

The Queen's birthday was generally observed as a holiday in Calgary. There was nothing exciting going on. The Calgary base ball club went to the R. Mrs. H. C. and Miss Rogers, wife and daughter of Gen. H. C. Rogers, of Vancouver, Ont., are visiting at Mr. E. J. Rogers. These ladies have made a very extended tour in the States, taking in Denver, Col., Santa Barbara, Los Angeles, travelling by many different lines of railway. They have now come from Vancouver by the C. P. R. They state that in all their travels they have no where met with as good accommodation, attention, and hospitality as on the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Nigger John, who made such a large attempt to kill a colored girl the other night, has not been caught yet, he is supposed to be lurking around somewhere close by, as he came into a boarding house about 3 a. m. yesterday morning and took away some clothes. Two of the towns-lice were hunting for him yesterday afternoon, and we understand four mounted police were on the look out last night for him. The doctor attending the wounded girl, says he never saw such a cut up face in his life, as she has.

FROM THE CAPITAL.

PARLIAMENT PROLOGUED YESTERDAY.

The Farewell Address of the Senate and Commons Presented to Lansdowne

OTTAWA, May 23.—At four o'clock the Commons received the customary summons and proceeded to the Senate chamber where His Excellency prologued Parliament with the usual speech from the throne.

A farewell address of the Senate and Commons to the Governor-General was presented in the Senate chamber this afternoon before a brilliant assembly of legislators, staff, city, military officers and leading residents, including their lady friends in large numbers. The address was read by Speaker Allen of the Senate and Speaker Oulmet of the Commons in French and was replied to by Lord Lansdowne in both languages. His Excellency and Lady Lansdowne were apparently deeply affected at the prospect of the early separation of their pleasant relations with Canada.

Davin had an interview with Sir John in reference to the construction of the Regina & Long Lake railway. The Government recognize the importance of completing the road to Prince Albert and assistance will be given in some form to enable a number of miles to be completed this year.

They Should go.

To the Editor of the Herald.

Dear sir,—Kindly allow me a little space in your valuable paper, that I may endeavor to draw the attention of our "City Fathers," and also that of our citizens, to some matters which ought to engage the attention of all who have the interests of our town at heart. It is this: That so many dens of vice and infamy are allowed to carry on their abominable traffic at our very doors, and it appears to be nobody's business to interfere with them. Some of us have children, and what parents worthy of the name, which do not wish their children to grow up pure and virtuous. Can we expect it when we allow these pest-houses to flourish, almost within a stone's throw of our public school.

May I ask whose business it is to attend to this matter? We elected men to guard the interests of our town; surely this is one of its most vital interests. They have spent money in trying to influence the powers that be; to rectify some matters that militate against its prosperity. Now if they would turn their attention to ridding it of the cess-pools of vice which abound, they would be doing more for the interests of the town than any of the late deputations accomplished, and cost less. It does seem to me, sir, that there is something wrong in the administration of justice here. In a conversation with one of our councillors a short time ago, he referred to some disreputable practices which were being carried on, in a house on one of our principal streets. He said the police knew all about it. The police know all about it; the council know all about it; and yet there is nothing done to prevent or put a stop to it. Strange, very strange. What are the police for? Is it simply to walk up and down the streets and draw their pay? It looks like it, now sir, I would like to know whether it is the fault of the police that this matter is not looked after, or whether it is the powers that govern the actions of the police, that are at fault. Wherever it is, it ought to be set right, and steps taken to banish that abominable nuisance from our midst. Thanking you for your space, I am, yours respectfully, W. H. Coshino.

The war between the saloon keepers and the Law and Order League, which has been progressing for some months, has received a check in an unexpected quarter. The League imported detectives from Ottawa and for a time secured many convictions for infractions of the liquor law, and enriched the Provincial treasury to a large extent. But in a week charges were made against William McChes, of Toronto, and Pat Dinen, of Hamilton, the League's detectives, for selling obscene pictures, and though the case was clear, the League's influence secured a postponement, and the prisoners were released on bail to appear yesterday. When the case was called they were not in, and the League officers who went their bail not only lost $200 on each, the amount of the bail, but also some hundreds which had been advanced to the detectives. The League now charge that the liquor men bribed the detectives to stay away, and that the latter extorted money from the saloon men under promise that pending cases should be dropped.

LINCOLN'S DEATH BED.

ITS SCENES GRAPHICALLY DESCRIBED BY AN EYE WITNESS.

The Blood Stained Pillows and Quilt. Unpublished Incidents of Lincoln's Last Hours Told by the Son of the Owner of the House in Which He Died.

(Special Correspondence.)

WASHINGTON, April 16.—I held in my hands last night some of the most ghastly relics of the history of our country. These were two plain pillow cases, stained with blood and clotted with brains. They were yellow with age, and the crimson of the blood had faded, but the great stains had dyed nearly the whole of the pillows, and where the brains had oozed out the cloth was thick and matted. I handled also a blood stained quilt, which was originally a beautiful piece of Irish worsted work, and the colors of which, strange to say, were red, white and blue. The blood was spattered over this quilt as over the pillows, and the purple stains had discolored its beauty. I examined the stains carefully, and though I shuddered I looked again and again at the ghastly sight.

And it is worth looking at, too, for it was on these clothes that Abraham Lincoln, just twenty-three years ago last Sunday, breathed his last. These clots of brains helped to work out the problems of the late war, and that dark red blood felt the heart of the kindest president the United States has known.

A straight young man of medium height, with a pleasant face, stood by me as I looked, and, taking the clothes, showed me here and there the spots where the president had laid. This young man was the son of the owner of the house in which Lincoln died. He was a well grown boy when the assassination took place, and he is now, I judge, about 40 years of age. His name is Peterson, and he was 16 years old when the assassination took place.

"On this pillow case," said he, "President Lincoln lay when he was first brought in, but it soon became saturated with blood, and Secretary Stanton asked me for another. I brought him this" (taking up the second), "and on this he died."

"The scenes are fresh now as if they had happened but yesterday. I was at home for my Easter vacation, and my father lived in the brick house just opposite Ford's theatre. This theatre was then the leading one of Washington, and a box was always reserved for Lincoln. I was well acquainted with the theatre people, and I knew the ins and outs well. Lincoln attended the theatre often, and he was surprised one time to see young Tad on the stage, dressed up to represent one of the minor characters. He did not know him at first, but his actions seemed strangely familiar, and when he saw who it was he burst into a ha! ha! which called the attention of the house to his box."

"I knew Wilkes Booth very well, and he sometimes slept at our house. He was a tall, well made young fellow, and he had large black eyes and luxuriant black hair. He was a nervous, erratic, strange man; and it is a curious thing that he slept in our house a week before this deed was done, and under this same coverlid upon which Lincoln died."

"The assassination, you know, occurred on the night of the 14th of April, and I saw Booth that morning riding a little sorrel mare down Pennsylvania avenue. It was not far off from Willard's hotel that I saw him, and I was then on my way to play ball on the grounds just below the White House. When the game was over I went home and had supper. After supper I went to the theatre, but I did not go to Ford's, as I had often seen the "American Cousin," but I went to another theatre, where "Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp" was being played. As I started out to go to the theatre I saw the president's carriage drive up to Ford's, and President Lincoln and some other gentlemen and ladies got out. After I had been at the theatre but a short time the manager came to the front of the stage and said that the performance had to stop, as the president had been shot at Ford's. The crowd made a rush for the doors, and I tried to go home. As I reached the corner of Tenth and E streets, a block away from the theatre, I heard some men gathered around a fellow whom they had caught hold of, and yelling: "Hang him! hang him!" They were standing under a sycamore tree, and one of them suggested that it was a good place to string him up. The wretch was a poor fellow who had nothing to do with the assassination, but whom they suspected. I pushed my way past these men, and finally got to the door of my father's house. Two soldiers were in front of it. I tried to pass them, but they said: "You can't go in. The president is lying in there."

"But I live here," I replied.

"That makes no difference, you can't go in," returned the soldiers.

"I will see if I can't get in," I muttered to myself as I slipped around to a shutter which I knew could be opened, and climbed into the window. The first man I met was my father, and he told me the president was lying in the room the actor Matthews had formerly occupied, and that he wanted me to help him. My sister was at school at Bethlehem, Pa., and my mother was there with her. So I was practically alone with my father."

"Did Lincoln die in the room into which he was first carried?"

"Yes, but this room has not been well represented in the pictures of the scene. It was a small narrow room in the rear of the house and just at the end of the entrance hall. It was about ten feet wide and fifteen feet long. It was very plainly furnished, and the walls were covered with brown and white stripes of paper running up and down from the floor to the ceiling. Some engravings and photographs were hanging on the wall" (here Mr. Peterson pointed to some cheap pictures upon the walls of his room where we were sitting),

"and these pictures were among them. The furniture of the room was very simple. There was merely a bureau, a little black walnut bedstead and a few chairs."

"When I came in the president was lying on the bed. His face looked ghastly, and the blood was still flowing from his wound upon the pillows. The blood flowed fast and the pillows were saturated. A number of the cabinet, including Edwin Stanton, Salmon P. Chase, Secretary Wells and others, stood beside the bed, and several doctors were present. Charles Sumner sat on the bed holding the president's hand, and sobbed like a child. There were tears in the eyes of nearly every man present, and now and then they tried to speak with the president. But he was unconscious. He lay with his head on this pillow, and his eyes, all blood shot, almost protruded from their sockets. His face twitched, and it looked as though he was trying to speak, but I suppose the action of his features was involuntary."

"Was Mrs. Lincoln present?" I asked.

"No, at this time she was in an adjoining room, and Robert was there trying to comfort her. She was sobbing and crying, and during that night she came now and then to the bed and burst into a flood of tears, and then went away, sobbing, into the other room. The doctors wanted some hot water and bottles and asked me to get them for them. We had a hot fire in the kitchen, and I had the cook put the hot water in the bottles and bring them in. The doctors then placed them about the body of the president, rubbing his limbs all the time to keep the blood in circulation. I helped them, and stood at the foot of the bed, rubbing his right leg. At this time all hope had not been given up, but as the night wore on the prospects became very gloomy, and the scene comes before me to-night."

"Between 3 and 4 o'clock I got very sleepy, and was sitting on a trunk at the foot of the bed and nodding. Secretary Wells touched me and said: 'My boy, you are tired out, and you had better go out and get some sleep, and we will call you if we need you.' At this I went into the next room and sat down upon a rocking chair. I was soon sound asleep, but in a moment a rough hand caught my shoulder, and Secretary Stanton's voice said: 'My boy, this is no time to sleep, and you had better go in and watch.' I then returned to my place, but I could not keep my eyes open, and I finally went into the back room and slept till dawn. It was just light when I returned to the death chamber. President Lincoln was breathing so heavily that you could have heard him in any part of the house. His face was death like, and his jaw had fallen down upon his breast, showing his teeth. So he remained until 7:23, when he died."

"I have never seen a correct painting of the death bed. A lot of cheap things were thrown upon the country at the time, but they were not in accordance with the facts. Mrs. Lincoln is painted in these pictures as kneeling at the bedside and holding her husband's hand as the life went out of his body. She was, in fact, not in the room. The cabinet were, however, all present, and all were weeping. Charles Sumner and Robert Lincoln stood together, and Sumner's arm was thrown around young Robert's shoulders. Sumner was crying, and young Lincoln was sobbing."

"I then left the house and went to tell my father, who was at his store. It was a nasty day. As I opened the door I saw that it was drizzling, cloudy and dark. There was a guard around the house, and also one stationed on each of the corners, above and below. I gave the first announcement of the death to them and through them to the outside world. I got father, and when I came back the president was all black about the eye and forehead. I put my hand on his face, and it was as cold as a stone."

"Soon after this Mr. Lincoln was taken from the house. His body was wrapped up in a couple of blankets and carried to the embalmers. It was then laid out in state in the East Room of the White House."

"You do not own the house in which President Lincoln died, Mr. Peterson?"

"No; all is changed now, and these relics which I have are the last practical evidences of the president's last sufferings. The room in which he died has been changed, and we have sold the house to its present owner, Mr. Louis Shade. We got $4,500 for it, and the buyer took it because he thought the government would use it as a museum, and he asked, some time ago, $12,000 for it. These pictures and these pillow cases are all that is left of the furniture. We sold the bed upon which the president died for $50, and I think it is now in Syracuse, N. Y. No one has ever slept under this coverlid since that night, and we would not think of using it. I do not think it should be sold to any one. It should be preserved for a museum. We could have sold it time and again."

"It is wonderful the desire people have for collecting relics of Lincoln. They came for days after the president's death to see the room in which he died, and they stole everything they could get their hands on. They snipped pieces out of the curtains, pulled paper off of the walls, and even carried away the mustard plasters we used that night. When the president was carried over from the theatre to the house that night, some drops of his blood fell upon our doorstep, and the next day men and boys dipped little pieces of paper into this blood, and carried them away as mementoes."

"The day after the assassination was Sunday, and Washington was draped in black, and all the preachers preached funeral sermons over him."

"I don't like to think of it," concluded Mr. Peterson, as he folded up the blood stained pillow cases and quilt. "The scenes of it sometimes haunt me like a nightmare, and I almost wish that I had not been a part of them."

A generous move on the part of Mr. Prince, manager of the Eau Claire lumber mills, of Calgary, has accidentally been brought to our notice. The lumber company, desirous of having the men with families in their employment, provided with homes that they could call their own, has purchased from the townsate trustee, not far from the mills 22 lots, on which he will proceed to erect eleven comfortable frame, four roomed houses, giving two lots to each house. The houses will cost about $600 apiece, besides cost of lot, the lots costing less than $100 each. These houses will be rented in the mean time to the employees at $7.00 per month. An amount of the rents will be kept, and if any family lives long enough in a house for the rent to amount to the cost of the house without interest, will be given a free deed of his dwelling. We understand that Mr. G. C. Marsh, the wide awake land agent, negotiated the deal with C. P. R. trustees for the lots, and in view of the ungratified action of Mr. Prince with his men, Mr. Marsh charged no commission on the deal.

An Historical Lunatic.

TOPEKA, Kan., May 28.—A sensation was caused here to-day by the escape from the State insane asylum of Boston Corbett, who killed Wilkes Booth, the assassin of President Lincoln. While out for regular exercise with the regular patrols, Corbett suddenly broke from the ranks and jumped on a horse belonging to a visitor and was away before the guards could realize what happened. Corbett has been confined in the asylum for the past month, and during that time has been more or less violent and several times threatened to escape and kill the Governor and other state officers who had anything to do with his incarceration. It is believed that he has gone to his home Cloud county. Corbett, while acting as doorkeeper of the state House of Representatives a year ago, caused the House to adjourn suddenly by flourishing two pistols and threatening to kill the speaker and other members.

Chief of police Dillabough and constable McClelland, left Calgary in pursuit of this would be murderer, on Sunday night, by freight train west, at 7:30 o'clock, they got to Cochrane at 8:30, getting no word of him there, they went on to the mills. Mr. Bangs informed the police that he had seen a man answering John's description on the old tram road at the brick kiln, about 5:30 p. m. Sunday, and was apparently cooking some grub, shortly after he was reported to have come down towards the Morley trail, heading for the west. The police got a horse from Mr. Bangs and started in pursuit, reaching Ghost river about 2 a. m., they found the water too high to ford, concluding that John could not have crossed the river either, the police camped till daylight, then returning eastward, they examined all the ranch yards, and all the houses, as well as the coal mine and buildings connected with it, getting back to the Cochrane mills about noon Monday, at this point the police found that the "black bird" had taken the back track to Cochrane station, where he stopped and bought some crackers and cheese at Johnson's store. From there he went west again, the police then searched on the south side of the Bow river, as far as Radenhurst station and then back to Cochrane where they arrived at 6 p. m. Monday, where they got supper. They then again interviewed Mr. Bangs, who had learned from Mr. Sheppard, that the nigger had been seen that evening on the Cochrane sheep ranch, about a mile west of the station. Mr. Bangs again kindly furnished the police with a rig, in which they went in pursuit, they found their man at a little house, where he had gone to rustle some supper. The police ordered him to throw up his hands which he did and submitted to arrest without resistance his blankets were in one of the sheep corrals. The nigger was fed and cared for and was brought to Calgary by this morning's express. The police wish to acknowledge the kindness of Mr. Bangs in furnishing them with a horse and rig and meals, when very much needed and which materially assisted them in capturing the brute they were in search of. He was remanded by Mayor Shelton till Friday p. m., when it is expected his victim will be able to appear. He has been taken to the N. W. M. P. cells for safe keeping.

The police station wants painting very badly, it would be well for the boys to try their hands on it too.

Mr. Miquelon, immigration agent, is away attending the wedding of one of his daughters, at Qu'Appelle to-day.

The water in the Bow river has raised twenty inches since Saturday night and is still rising, which is caused by the snow melting in the mountains.

Mr. Parslow received on Saturday night a consignment of three yoke of working cattle, part of them for use on the Sarcee reserve, and part of them for Morley, to which places they have been sent.

The wood work on the outside of the fire hall has been painted. The thing has been done on economical principles, the paint having been purchased by the town and put on by the inspector and engineer.

I have the honor to be gentlemen, your obedient servant,
